The Story of the Constellations

Long ago, the gods of ancient Greece decided to honor their beloved heroes by placing them among the stars. One of these heroes was Orion, a brave hunter who roamed the earth. His companion, a loyal dog named Canis, was also placed among the stars.

As the story goes, Orion's vanity angered the goddess Artemis. She sent a scorpion to kill Orion, and as he lay dying, he asked Zeus to place him and his dog among the stars. Zeus granted his wish, but also placed the scorpion among the stars as a reminder.

Today, we can see the constellations Orion and Canis Major shining brightly in the night sky. The constellation Scorpius, representing the scorpion, is visible on the opposite side of the sky. According to legend, Orion and the scorpion will forever be locked in a celestial battle.
